	A few cows were a bit anxious coming through the yards again, after they were preg tested the day before. Just a bit stubborn, not wanting to come up the race, then doing a bit of rocking around on the scales. Once they'd been through and were back in the holding yard, they settled down and were much quieter.

Assessor Comments	Good run of proven matrons to take on. Preg tested in calf to a the Scott's Angus Bull. These breeders were brought for their long deep bodied structure and good square backs, and the Scott's Angus sire they've been joined to should compliment these attributes and produce good solid little calves. Scanned up and ready to drop a calf within the first few days of August and have a good calf firing along by mid Spring.
