|                    | steers will move to a corner of a yard when pressure is applied. if you handle the way cattle should be handled they settle down quite well. steers are not aggressive at all, just hadn't been handled alot by previous owner.                    |                          |                          |            |

| Assessor Comments  | Perfect feeder steers that have been very well back grounded for the feedlots. Cattle have done really well since arriving onto this property, in my opinion they will feed very well. 200/225 are one mark steers and the other 25 one mark also, |                          |                          |            | these steers are highly regarded as good cattle to feed on with. Feedback from feedlots has been this also. There is the very odd old pink eye scaring but not detrimental to sight at all. 225 steers in 3 lots (run out the gate) and another lot of heavier steers also
